I'm Nobody. Who are you?

I AM A REPTILE (but I want to be a helicopter)

What is love? Baby don't hurt me, don't hurt me, no more:

Devin Morse - Div III is a quirky misadventure

F. "FSTEWZ" Stewart-Taylor - crushing souls

Jonathan Gardner - where's my Chinese food?

B Corfman - cookies

Jesse Ide - yes we can

Nick Cole-Giscombe - I want to be the Godfather of Hampshire College

Grace Willey - but will your fortune still be in the cookie?

Nora Miller - only if we replace them with markov chains of edward gorey quotes

Policy

The Omen is a biweekly publication that is the world's only example of the consistent application of a straightforward policy: we publish all signed submissions from members of the Hampshire community that are not libelous. Send us your impassioned yet poorly-thought-out rants, self-insertion fan fiction, MS Paint comics, and whiny emo poetry: we'll publish it all, and we're happy to do it. The Omen is about giving you a voice, no matter how little you deserve it. Since its founding in December of 1992 by Stephanie Cole, the Omen has hardly ever missed an issue, making it Hampshire's longest-running publication.

Your Omen submission (you're submitting right now, right?) might not be edited, and we can't promise any spellchecking either, so any horrendous mistakes are your fault, not ours. We do promise not to insert comical spelling mistakes in submissions to make you look foolish. Your submission must include your real name: an open forum comes with a responsibility to take ownership of your views. (Note: Views expressed in the Omen do not necessarily reflect the views of the Omen editor, the Omen staff, or anyone, anywhere, living or dead.)

The Omen staff consists of whoever shows up for Omen layout, which usually takes place on alternate Thursday nights in the basement of Merrill on a computer with an extremely inadequate monitor. You should come. We don't bite. You can find the Omen on other Thursdays in Saga, the post office, or on the door of your mod.

Submissions are due always, constantly, so submit forever. You can submit in rich text or plain text format by CD, Flash Drive, singing telegram, carrier pigeon, paper airplane, Fed-Ex, Pony Express, or email. Get your submissions to omen@hampshire.edu or F. Stewart-Taylor, box 1092

EDITORIAL

F. Stewart-Taylor

Vol. 41, #1 · The Omen

Hey Omenites! Welcome back to another Omen- you know the drill by now: freedom of speech, your submissions, don't break any laws within the pages of this publication but otherwise send us all your shitty poetry and dumb political rants or like heartfelt photoshops of your grandma cage fighting Jonathan Lash. Omen@Hampshire.edu, or come to layouts alternate Thursdays in the merrill basement. So if you're reading this on the 21st? Not tonight, sorry!/

Real talk: I am having some difficulties editorializing for this issue. Every sentence I write feels is like I hacked it up like a hairball, all clumped and messy and coated in a thin layer of unnecessary adverbs, which are the mucous of the English language. Maybe it's a crisis of confidence. Maybe it's writer's block. Maybe it's just late fall doldrums because I miss the sunlight and artificial light kinda wigs me out. Whatever it is, I have just been doing the mental equivalent of slouching around in sweat pants with ketchup stains and watching Netflix all day. So we're gonna just do this lightening talk style. I have a lot of ill founded opinions and I am just going to type them very quickly and we'll see if that coheres into an editorial of any kind.

Bathroom policy on campus: While there is no reason whatsoever to have gendered bathrooms at all if there's stalls with locks, I acknowledge some women's desire to have a single-gender bathroom for safety reasons. I propose the following compromise: all academic buildings and housing units have two bathrooms: one women's-only, and one gender neutral. Both bathrooms must have stalls and privacy locks. Men are required to walk into the hampshire woods to use the bathroom, and may not make eye contact or speak with other persons on the way to or from. In fact, men are prohibited from making eye contact with any member of the student body, at any time. Their possessions will be confiscated, and used to pay for the new bathroom infrastructure. While I recognize there may be concerns about the environmental impact of this policy on the Hampshire woods, all parties involved must recognize that it is the most reasonable possible compromise.

Campus drug policy: In the wake of the UMass canceling Return to Fantasia because of concerns about MDMA related deaths in New England and drug related incidents on our own campus, conversations about changing Hampshire's fairly permissive drug culture have been happening, particularly about Hampshire Halloween. Cultures of gratuitous or excessive drug or alcohol abuse are linked to sexual assault or "grey" consent, which we all know is no consent at all. Over the summer internet trolling began, and continues to happen, about the possibilities of a "smoke free" Hampshire. Concerns about respect for students' health and wellbeing have motivated calls to enforce smoking bans near buildings and consider more strict limits on where students may smoke. On the other hand, certain high-risk populations would be unfairly targeted by a smoke free policy, and any change in drug policy risks unfairly targeting students with substance problems instead of offering help and support while curtailing mischief and harm. These are difficult issues, and I propose that a "three strikes" policy be initiated, where any person found smoking too near a building or causing anyone any grief with their substance use be struck three time across the face. Any money they drop during these disciplinary actions should be put to substance education and safety programs, particularly publicizing where and how to get help with a substance problem or during a substance related medical emergency.

Mental health on campus: I will kick you into the fucking moon if you think we don't need better mental health resources on campus. THE FUCKING MOON. Don't even fucking start with me. Remember as we go into finals and all year round that your worth is not determined by your productivity, or by how easy you are to get along with. It is not determined by how much you are able to please others or by your ability to minimize your "imposition" on them. Your worth is not determined by your emotional stability, by how much or how little you cry or how much help you need. You have the right to self care, self respect, and self determination, now and always. You also and always have the right to kick people to the fucking moon if they try to start some shit with you over your use of medication, your efforts to find help and treatment, or your refusal to be stigmatized or talked over because of your mood disorder or mental illness. Any money they drop during the moon-kicking process you should spend on treating yourself to something nice, because you deserve it.

Love, Yr editrix,
FStewz.

Don't be a Mannequin: Advice on Effective Allyship -Jesse Ide

So at the queer conversations lunch today we were talking about a lot of stuff and at one point we got onto "What does it mean to be 'actively anti-blank' as we love to say so much at Hampshire?" My response to that was responded to with "you should write that down and post it somewhere, like in the Omen" pretty resoundingly fast by a bunch of people, so that's what this is. This is not "How to be an ally" because that's more complicated, this is just advice for a certain phenomenon.

To be actively anti-[insert an oppression that is not your own here] requires that you don't just side with that oppressed group when it is in the news. You have to be actively thinking about and engaging with that issue, trying to understand for yourself what is oppressive so that you can try and evaluate when something is problematic on your own. You see, a lot of people who want to be an ally, or who just don't want to be problematic, will do this thing where they'll defer to people from an oppressed group about what is problematic and what is not. They are afraid that they'll be wrong and end up being racist/(cis)sexist/transphobic/ableist/homophobic/offensive themselves, and they know that the oppression is not their own experience so they don't think they're able to evaluate things on their own. So they just defer to oppressed people about what to do and what to think. "Is this offensive? Is that offensive? I saw this comment chain online and I don't know what to say but someone said the word trans and ????" They want to just be a posable mannequin that is used for the cause (though often times even when that's what offered, when the time comes when they are actually needed they don't always stick to their commitments).

The problem with this is that it does not actually help the oppressed people you're trying to be an ally to. Oppressed people have to deal with their oppressions every day, constantly explaining it, it's exhausting. A good ally should take work off of the shoulders of the oppressed people they are trying to be an ally to. By deferring to your friend who's trans all the time about how to refer to someone's body parts or what they think about some article or thing you overheard at saga, you're just making more work for them that they might not otherwise even encounter and get upset about.

To be an actively anti-something ally, you need to actively learn about and educate yourself about those topics, really think hard and get to a point where you can see something and say "Wow, that is certainly racially problematic" and really understand why that thing is problematic, not just that you heard from your friend who's black that things like that are problematic for some reason you forgot because cognitively it's more difficult to store and reference like 500 instances of specific examples than an understanding of a topic that you can derive your own examples from when needed. Get over your fears of talking about and engaging with these issues! A fear of talking about an issue only perpetuates the problem! If you do mess up, step back, apologize, and learn from it.

This is not to say that you should ever speak for or over the oppressed people who you are trying to be an ally to. Do collect your people and explain to them why they're being problematic, but do not try and 'speak for the people'. You still don't know what it's like to be the kind of oppressed you're being actively anti-, but you can still try and understand why some things are oppressive to those people you are trying to be an ally to. When you understand for yourself, then you can actively engage other people in these discussions and educate them, because people will listen to you and you have more energy for this. Now you're actually being helpful. A mannequin that is posed to be "right" is a passive prop that isn't very useful. An actual living person who understands and engages with topics of oppression is a very useful person to have around.

How Many Mangoes Are In A Papaya?

Can I ask this question?

No

Why not?

Huh, why?

Trigger Warning:

The following article proposes a narrative of the Shokazoba controversy that marginalizes the concerns of students who were involved in the decision to cancel their performance, as well as doing so in what is, in my opinion, needlessly hyperaggressive and racist language. While the Omen supports free speech in all forms, I consider it important to give readers fair warning of material which could potentially be triggering. To clarify: this trigger warning is not the Omen as an institution censoring you. It is a submission from me, personally. If the author of the following piece would like to discuss it, they may email me at jrg11@hampshire.edu.

-Jonathan "no seriously can we all shut up about Shokazoba yet?" Gardner

Your Rights End Where My Feelings Begin: A Lesson for the Outside World, Courtesy of Hampshire College

-Hans Fett

Hampshire made the news recently, when the Hype Committee canceled the scheduled Hampshire Halloween performance of Afro-beat band "Shokazoba" for being "too white."

Approximately 30 people (wow) on and off campus took to social media to complain about the unprecedented "cultural appropriation" inherent in a bunch of white people (minus the half-black singer, who doesn't count 'cuz she looks kinda white) playing music influenced by black people. This torrent of internet indignance led to a meeting, which led to a decision to cancel the band's appearance.

Ah! But the real issue, according to the Hype committee, was not that they were white (or "white-passing"), but those horribly insensitive comments the band left on Facebook after being confronted about their unforgiveable complexion.

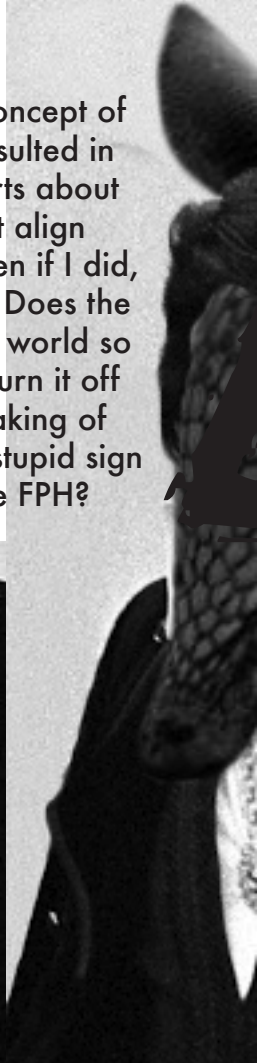

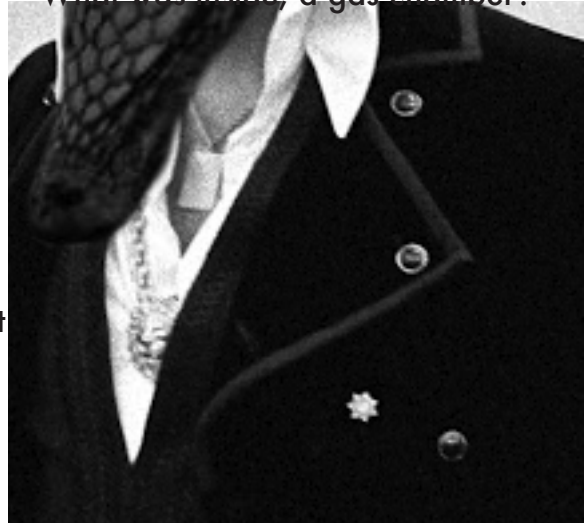

Well, O.K., so the actually derisive comments were left by an off-campus troll, but surely the band was doing their best Strom Thurman impression, to attract so much ire. So what did these blackfaced MegaHitlers say to force the Hype committee's hand? I'm not sure if these are direct Mein Kampf quotes, but two statements the Social Justice crowd took special issue with, posted by the band on the committee's Facebook page, were "we're all different shades of brown," and "music travels."

In what psychotically intolerant and ideologically closed-minded place is "we're all different shades of brown" anything more or less than a pleasantry, an obvious bid to appease the insatiable Social Justice Warriors without moving into political territory? (Oh right, Hampshire.) The band is guilty of, at worst, ignorance, but they're musicians, not Ecofeminist Privilology majors at a rich kid's liberal arts school; you can't expect them to know all the super-secrets of how the world works.

But what about their second doublehitler, that “music travels?” Well obviously the only rational conclusion is that they were marginalizing the horror of the trans-Atlantic slave trade! We should praise God that when the first ape hit some shit with a rock, there were no social justice chimps there to screech (or passive-aggressively blog) CULTURAL APPROPRIATION when the others thought “sounds like a good idea m8.” Fuck the early Chinese advances in rocketry; that’s just a phallic expression of male violence, right? And I suppose the Arabs should’ve just let the entirety of Greek thought pass out of human consciousness, because Dworkin forbid they should copy someone else’s ideas. Fuck the Renaissance, Humanism, and all of its ilk, which was only able to come about through the influence of these Greek ideas. After all, without an Enlightenment, this particular contingent of people would have to get their panties twisted about how oppressed Thomas Aquinas was, or something. I assert that this concept of “cultural appropriation” is the thought-criminalization of a natural and actually beneficial process: the exchange of ideas between cultures, and the band is in no way oppressing anyone because of their part in that process. It’d be one thing if they were on stage in black face, but these are obviously people who care about their music, and they shouldn’t have to bend their pasty asses over just because a diverse and self-righteous legion of keyboard crusaders says so.

So we admit that the issue is not really that the band was racist, simply that they were insufficiently the exact brand of self-flagellating anti-racist necessary to appease the social justice crowd. This, to the Hype Committee, was enough to prevent them from expressing themselves at a fucking Halloween party (check your non-pagan privilege you appropriators). Is this insularity really a healthy or sustainable mentality for a community to have? We’ve gone beyond circle-jerking here; we’re whacking it into a giant condom and chucking it at other people when it gets full. This whole concept of an “actively anti-racist school” has resulted in a delusional vocal minority that cavorts about imposing its will unchallenged. I don’t align myself with the vocal minority, but even if I did, why the fear of ideological diversity? Does the truth fear investigation? Is the outside world so scary that Hampshire college has to turn it off to maintain its veneer of utopia? Speaking of which, what was with that goddamn stupid sign that said “Post-Racial Utopia,” outside FPH? What was inside, a gas chamber?

Said Vercingetorix to those at Alesia, by Robb Carroll

Said the courier:

Do you hear the clatter of blade on shield
And the legion's oncoming thunder?
Taste you the blood on the mount and field
Of your country clove asunder?

Tribe and nation squandered in death!
Cower, fatherland, and defeated, lay prone Heave you Gallic chest, and draw your last breath
And die before Caesar's throne!

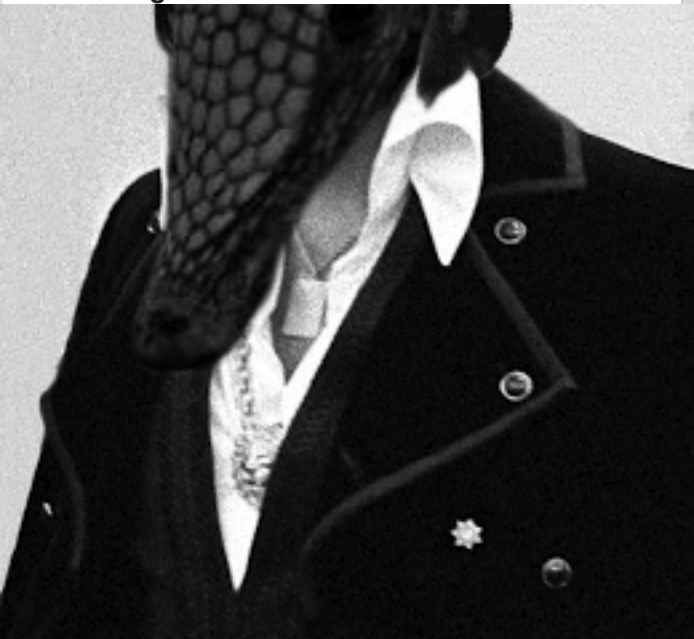

Replied Vercingetorix:

Oh Alesian host, who have reared your pride
For time eternal in this land
On your feet, prepare spear and chide
Call upon the gods' swift hand

Oh children of Gaul, do not give way!
Do you hear the trumpets of relief?
Now is night, but await the day
Fight on with shield and belief!

Be strong! Be strong! Let not our line waver
Take up your swords, we must endure!
Scorn far-reaching Roma's slavers
And strike them clear and sure!

Then charged the son of Celtill!

B's Griddler Extravaganza!

Fill out the image to the right! The rules of griddlers are simple:

In each column and row, there are a number of clue numbers inside colored boxes. Each number represents a group of contiguous boxes of that length, with any non-zero number of blank boxes between these groups.

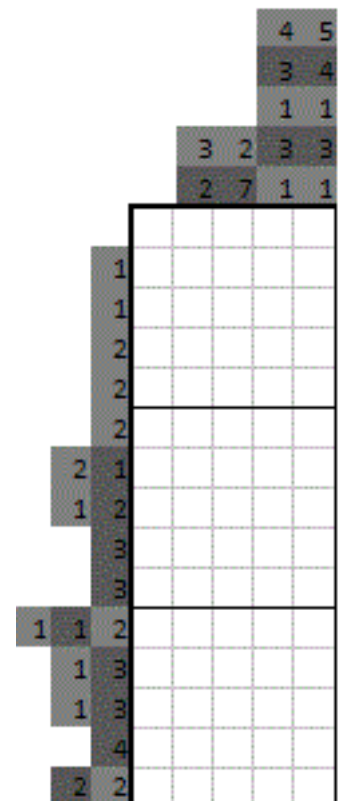

One exception to the above: groups of different colors do not need to have spaces between them.

There is no need to guess! It's possible to fill out the whole image with logic.

This is part one of many. There will probably be more than one piece in upcoming issues, but you'll have to find them all and tape them together or something in order to find the ~~~secret image~~~.

I don't know, this image is like 200x183 and I'm not laying out the whole thing in one issue for you assholes.
